SCOPE AND CONTENTS OF THE COLLECTION

The Collection consists of more than 4500 items spanning from an 1804 news clipping to 1972 campaign buttons. All items from campaigns after 1972 came from sources other than the original donor (as well as some original 19th century campaign publications). The campaigns most thoroughly represented are those of 1936-1952, including more than 1500 campaign buttons (including many duplicates for some campaigns), original campaign song books, and 60 original drawings of political cartoons from that timeframe. Taken as a whole, the collection is a microcosm of the changing nature of campaign memorabilia, and how more elaborate items of the 19th century (glassware, jewelry) were less prominent by the 20th century, while simpler items such as ribbons, buttons, and novelties were a consistent staple from the 19th century to the 1950s and 1960s. Researchers in need of illustrated examples for studies of presidential campaigns will find the collection particularly useful, as well as gain insight to the methods of mass communication in the pre-television era of campaigns, and how these items reflected the tone of the actual campaigns.
